Having children was much more dangerous in (7)hose days: one in every nine women died in childbirth. Even so, women (8)used to have many more children than they do today: in 1800 the average (9) Americanily had seven children - today the average is (10)ess than two. Perhaps the reason for this was that so many babies died: even a hundred years ago, 20% of children died (11)before they were five.

One reason that there were so many diseases was that people (12)_____ much less about hygiene: even rich people didn't use to wash much - many people thought that it was (13)dangerouto take a bath, so they often bathed only once or twice (14)a____ year. Instead they used perfume to cover (15)ody odours. Poor people didn't even have toilets or clean water and most had lice in (16)their_ hair, bodies, clothes and beds.

There was no toothpaste in those days (17)_____ and only rich people used toothbrushes. Of course, toothache was very (18)_common but there were no professional dentists until the (19)middle of the nineteenth century. Before that, if you had a toothache, you had to go to the barber's. He not only cut hair, but also used to take out (20)_teeth and perform other small operations.
